Rais Bhuiyan did, and will talk about “A World Without Hate”

10 days after 9/11 Mark Stroman started shooting people he thought were Arabs. Two died, and Rais Bhuiyan, although wounded, survived. He not only forgave Stroman, but worked to keep him from being executed. He says, “Hate doesn’t bring a peaceful solution to any situation, which I realized after I became a victim of a hate crime. This single incident changed my entire life and helped me to realize that hate only brings fear, misery, resentment and disaster into human lives. It creates obstacles to healthy human growth, which, in turn, diminishes society as a whole.”

Wednesday, April, 25 4:15-6:15 PM, Watson Forum

A CFT Conflict Commons and Prindle sponsored event