Gregory E. Asbury was reunited with his college class ring after nearly 24 years. The ring was especially made with his mother's original engagement diamond in it. He lost the ring in 1981 at McKinley Beach in Milwaukee, where the ring was found by a Milwaukee man who put it in a box. The man rediscovered the ring last March and took it to his sister in Chicago. His sister called DePauw, where public safety officer Angie Nally said she would try to find the owner. Nally was able to match the last name of the engraved signature inside the ring, which eventually led her to Gregory. Greg said, "I lost the ring, but the ring found me."
